

THE UNEMPLOYED BOOZER'S ROUGH GUIDE TO ICE HOCKEY

...or... the Barry Smith column

Marc

AWAY MATCHES

1: Nip down to "cheap liquor selling establishment" and purchase 5 litres of strong cider.

2: Leave plenty of time for arrival before face-off, then... find good pub on arrival (if unavailable, return to no.1)

3: On arrival, locate most important place, the bar (away seats come a poor second)

4: Enjoy first period...NOT! Then head for bar (approx. 1 minute early to avoid rush and to miss Lions opening goal)

5: Sing drunkenly for next 2 periods and head for bar

6: Cause varying amounts of chaos on trains during journey home. ie: "pebbledashing" the seats; singing loud, slurred Lions songs; collapsing on escalators (Tone H style)

LIONS THEME SONG RE-RECORDED BY G'n'R (Glum'n'Rubbish)

Football teams have always led the way in recording songs when they have good cup runs, etc... so this week, Lions supporters got together with the team at a London recording studio to remix "Welcome to the Jungle", as a way of celebrating OUR league form. Here's how it went...

Welcome to the Jungle (CET remix)

Fans: Welcome to the bungle
 We'll poke fun at James
 For-get evry win you want
 It's not the goalie we'll blame
 They aren't the people that can find
 The wins that we all need
 Now it just ain't funny, honey
 If only they could please....

In the jungle, welcome to the bungle
 Watch them bring you to your n-n-n-n-knees
 We're very bad indeed.

Welcome to the bungle
 We're thrashed in evry game
 We all drink like Ollie Reed
 But it's the price we pay

Lions: Now you're a bunch of lary girls
 And very hard to please
 You won't see no highlights
 But we want your entrance fee

All: In the jungle, welcome to the bungle
 See how he's brought us to our n-n-n-n-knees!

James: I'll laugh at all your dreams!

Fans: Welcome to the bungle
 It gets worse here evry day
 There's bad news on the Lions call
 From evry game we play

Lions: We might lead by two or three
 But we'll lose eventually
 You c'n ask for anything you want
 But we won't get up the league

Fans: You know where you are? You're in the jungle baby
 You're gonna cry!
